HOLLYWOOD—MUTI-TALENTS

more of historical value to American music is destroyed."

Meanwhile Mr. & Mrs. Fred Karlin are preserving two real American classics: she, a 1936 Auburn roadster; he, a 1933 two-tone green Chrysler Imperial convertible.

Over on the other side of town, on the way out to Warner's, is another writer who has created his own recording environment—in a tumble-down house called The Farm, on what was once the 44-acre Barham estate (hence Barham Boulevard, leading to Burbank). He is Cyrus Faryar, surrounded like the Karlins by a host of small pets, who has an album out this week, from Elektra, which he wrote (for the most part), arranged, plays and sings—and recorded in his livingroom with a little help from a lot of friends. "The LP is really what you might call a by-product of my everyday life and the people who've kind of passed in and out of the house—all friends, good people, good musicians—during the past year or so that it's taken to put it all together." They include Cass Elliott, Bob Gibson (the singer), Bruce Johnston, and Mrs. Faryar (Renaissance), who's represented by one track as well. "It's been fun," says Cyrus, "but now it's all merchandise, and now I'm a product, and it's time now to look ahead," to a road tour, to the next album.

Cyrus, born in Teheran, raised and schooled all over the map, is a former member of the now-legendary Modern Folk Quartet, which recorded two albums for Warner's. Ironical that he is now a neighbor, though the Farm (a sort of hip MacDowell Colony) is about as far as can be from the bustle of the studio/record company down below.
